

Does your dog buffer your Childs stress?

DOGS INTUITIVELY HELP OUR CHILDREN CALM THEIR STRESS AND ANXIOUSNESS OF THE WORLD AROUND THEM

Living in a home with a dog may be linked to healthier psychological development in young children, researchers report.

Australian scientists collected data from 1,646 parents of 3- to 5-year-old children on various socio-demographic factors – siblings, sleep time, screen time, parents' level of education, work status and so on. They also gathered information on dog ownership, active play with the dog and family dog walking. And they used a well-validated scale to measure the social and emotional development of the children.

The study found that after adjusting for other factors, compared to children without dogs, those who had them were about 30 percent less likely to have conduct problems, 40 percent less likely to have difficulty relating to peers, and 34 percent more likely to show pro-social behavior. There was no association of dog ownership with emotional difficulties or hyperactivity.

What better to offer a constant support system than a dog? A devoted dog to sleep in the child's room at night, to see him off to school and be there patiently waiting when he arrives home?

Your child's dog will be his absolute best friend, there to provide support when he needs it and the devoted contact he needs to grow.

Some examples of how a dog helps children:

- Relax and reduce everyday stress
- Feel less lonely
- Something to care for
- A great companion for single children

KEEP IN MIND...

Not all of our rescue dogs are compatible with children, and not all children are suitable for dogs! That is why Canine Haven Rescue emphasizes in adoption bios as well in the process of suiting the right home for each dog in our care.

Although some dogs can fully live in a home with a child, they may tolerate the child and avoid the companionship of a child, much preferring the quiet stability of an adult.

We take pride in finding the right rescue dog for each home, don't give up if your first application doesn't match well with the dog you initially had in mind, trust the process..... you may find that the dog you end up suited with is the best possible outcome. After all, our rescue dogs all have their own individual personalities and histories, just as your children do too!
